Dear Chastain Cousins

MENU

Every time I start working on an upcoming issue of Chastain Chatter, I wonder if I will be able to find enough interesting or helpful information to include in it. So far, this approach has worked. I still need your help, though. Don't be shy about sending suggestions or written material in to me. The Chastain Chatter needs you.

In this issue, be sure to check out the announcements in Section 2. As usual, you'll find the link to the visually appealing (enhanced) version of this issue of Chastain Chatter.

You'll also find the link to the Pierre Chastain Family Association's newly designed web site, and you'll find important information about joining (or rejoining) the PCFA, if you would like to support the organization.

For those who enjoy a little challenge, Chastain Trivia is in this issue in Section 4. These questions come from the factual tidbits I read on the new PCFA web site. You'll also find two articles written by Ron Roberts about the web site.

If you are looking for gift ideas for family members for Christmas or other occasions, look no more. The new blue PCFA T-Shirts and PCFA genealogy

Love and peace,

Karyl

publications can be ordered in time for Christmas if you get your order in the mail to Bonnie Wilkins immediately.

Another gift idea was brought to my attention by Donna Chastain Long. There's a service on the Internet called My Canvas. My Canvas creates beautiful family tree posters and family history books. I cannot imagine a more meaningful surprise to family members who cherish the family.

For more information about these gift ideas, check Section 7.

And finally, I will include all of our family in my heart and prayers during the holiday season. My prayer is for you to be safe, warm, and at peace within.

To contact me about anything in the Chastain Chatter (this issue or future issues), e-mail me at:

karylcb@cs.com and karylcb@gmail.com

(Note: I include both e-mail addresses because sometimes, one of them does not work as it should, so the second one is basically just a way to make sure I receive your message.)

If you would like to receive the January issue of The Chestnut Tree (the hard-copy PCFA magazine), you need to join or renew your membership in PCFA immediately. Check out the Appendix in Section 13 to get information and directions.

WANTED: EDITOR FOR THE CHESTNUT TREE

MENU

After the January issue of The Chestnut Tree is sent out, we will not have an editor for the PCFA genealogy magazine. The present Chestnut Tree editor, Susan Slape-Hoysagk, is stepping down to focus on the 'job' of Historian.

If you have dreamed of being a magazine editor and would like to accept the challenge, we need you.

And, if you like to write, or if you have expertise in genealogy or other issues that may be of interest to PCFA members – but the idea of being editor is a bit daunting – we need you, too.

If we can create an editorial team to work together to publish future issues of The Chestnut Tree, it would be ideal. Please let me know if you are interested.

Part 1

MENU

A very long time ago, a New York business executive was traveling from one meeting to another when he took a wrong turn and ended up lost way out in the back country. He saw a farmer plowing a field and stopped to ask directions. The farmer was encouragingly yelling at the mule pulling the plow, "Git along thar, Sammy. Git up, Billy. C'mon now, Joey. Strait up, Jonny, strait up. Go on now, Boss. Pull hard, Davy, pull."

When the farmer got close to the road the businessman asked him, "Just how many names does that mule have?"

The farmer replied, "Naw, he ain't got but the one. Long time ago I found out at long as he think they is five more mules a-hepin', he do all the work hissef."

The businessman said, "That's amazing, simply amazing."

He then went back to New York and invented the committee.

So, at the 2017 PCFA Reunion the Board and Family created a Tech Committee to oversee all things electronically technical, e.g., the web site, the FaceBook group, etc. We are Jimmy Chesteen, Chair; Carol Migdat, Karyl Chastain Beal and Ron Roberts.

Web sites are living, breathing things. They look static, but they are not. Or, more correctly, should not. Certainly there are some sites that just store information for later retrieval, but a site serving a family association and providing fresh genealogical information for its members, needs to be constantly on the move.

As technology advances, it becomes faster and easier to do genealogical research on the Internet. The PCFA site is starting to change from a static display of past work to a current research tool.

The first step was to revise the static part of the web site which was last re-written ca. 2008. Over the past few years some ideas were tossed around, but nothing solid was implemented.

This new site, so far, is essentially the old site with new skin, brain (menu), and a few augmented limbs. The basic design was created by our overworked genealogist, Jimmy Chesteen, who, in case you didn't know, developed the original site in 1996 when there was only one other known family genealogical site on the web.

Jimmy is also developing a new section of the site that will contain searchable information on the Chastain collective family tree. This section will be Members Only because it will contain information about living members of the Chastain Family. At this point, we do not know when that part of the site will be ready for use. There is a lot of work yet to be done.

Part 2

MENU

Rebuilding a long-standing web site can be a paradoxical dichotomy. It is easy to use a lot of the text which has been written over the years. However, changing the look, editing the phraseology, correcting the spelling and grammar and moving stuff from one page to another can occasionally lead to hard feelings.

Without trying to sound like a minimalist, most of what I did was the coding. The text was already written and the committee, with my wife Donna's editing input, made a vast majority of the re-write suggestions. Now, I did make myriad suggestions myself, mostly serious ones, but a few just for the hilarity of it.

The mouse pointer that looked like Pierre's Sword and turned red when encountering a link was axed immediately. The tree pointer scared the bejesus out of the girls - said it looked like a spider on the screen. I thought they were cute!

The feature I like the best on the new site is the menu system. It is literally unlimited. When I found this code back in 2004 I played around with it until I had links 25 deep. The code simply does not care how many layers of links you want. As of this writing (3 December 2017) the menu is 4 layers deep. With the new menu system, EVERY page is accessible from the menu. The menu is the site map.

The site now contains 50 pages (and growing) that cover a wide variety of topics from the life and times of Pierre Chastain, our Family Patriarch; to information about Alzheimer's Disease; to Spurious Genealogy research; to Membership joining and renewal; to book Publications and T-Shirt sales; to the PCFA Annual Reunions; to land sales in Arkansas and South Carolina; to early twentieth century Chastain Deaths in Texas; to a Huguenot Timeline containing 247 entries - and growing; to a Glossary of Relative Terms; to Cousin Charts to determine whether or not you should marry your cousin; to Links to 31 interesting web sites that can help with your family research; and lastly and most importantly - to the PCFA Board members who made it possible for all to this happen.

If you like to print pages from the web so they are easier to read (like my wife Donna), each page has a Printer Friendly version available through a link under the menu. Most of the Printer Friendly pages are regular web pages with all the fancy sidebars and colored background removed. They are formatted to fit regular 8.5" x 11" paper with 1" margins. However, a few pages required different formatting and are in a .PDF file. All the Printer Friendly pages open in a new tab in your browser.

The pages are laid out with a sidebar on each side of the main information section. Many of the pages have very interesting information in the sidebars so don't forget to read them, too. We are still working on adding pertinent material to this space.

On behalf of the Tech Committee, I hope you visit the site often. We plan to continue to expand the scope and depth of the site. Jimmy Chesteen, the PCFA Genealogist, is working overtime to get the genealogical section ready for publication.

The Chastain Chatter will announce new additions to the site.

Happy Surfing!

Family Surname History: Alternate Spellings

From findmypast.com

There is a widespread myth shared among family historians which is often used to explain variant spellings of last names, known as surnames: “The government changed the name at Ellis Island,” or so the story is told. Truth is, passenger lists were created at the port of departure, not upon arrival and there is not a single documented case of a family name being changed at Ellis Island.

Many alternate spellings of surnames have evolved over many generations and differ from one ethnic group to another. Language barriers, literacy, and a desire to be viewed as American shortly after arrival likely account for many of the alternate spellings in use today.

In some cases, the spelling variations are simple and subtle (e.g. – Phalen spelled as Phelan), in other cases the removal of a space or changing of one letter can also seem simple but have a big impact (e.g. – La Sorda, Lasorda, Lo Sardo, Losardo). Even some members within the same family adopted different spelling variations (e.g. – O’Rourke vs. Rourke).

Search tip: Single character wild cards can be used to accommodate for these name variants while searching (e.g. – L?s?rd? would capture Lasorda and Losardo). If your family history research includes one or more surnames prone to multiple spelling variants, consider how you can use wild cards or advanced search filters to locate those ancestors.

I love the fresh, new PCFA web site. My thanks to Jimmy Chesteen, Ron Roberts, and anyone else who was involved!
— Tim Chastain

(Note: Tim Chastain and his brother, Terry Chastain had been the web site administrators for the earlier PCFA web site for several years.)

---

Thank you for all the great informative and interesting newsletters. I have learned quite a bit and enjoyed all the issues. I absolutely LOVE the new PCFA web site. The menu items on the left work well. I tried the printer friendly version and love the way the page popped up right away!

I was amazed to see the oldest Chastain listed in the genealogy section of the site lived in France around the year 1084.

It was helpful to find the membership application form and the publications order form on the site. The amount of research on the site is amazing, and the Theory of Relativity was impressive. This is one of the most organized web sites I have ever seen, easy to follow and visually appealing. Thank you to Ron Roberts for all of his hard work on this site. Great job, Cousin Ron!

Love and peace,

— Cousin Rebecca Bigsby
